Hard Conversations Roundtables: Collaboration

In recent engagement, you have told us clearly that support for leaders must go hand in hand with influencing the context in which we all operate.

We have also heard that there are conversations we need to have, openly and honestly, if we are to navigate the complexity facing our sector and create meaningful, lasting change.

The Hard Conversations series is our response.

These roundtables, facilitated by Lucinda are designed to bring leaders together in a trusted space to explore the difficult questions, challenge assumptions and contribute to new ways of thinking and working. This is not about coming with all the answers. It is about creating the conditions to find them, together.

We begin with collaboration.

We know collaboration has the potential to unlock progress on some of our most intractable challenges. We also know it is not always easy. Structural barriers, competing pressures and questions of trust can all get in the way.

This is an opportunity to step into that reality with peers. To share your experience, to hear from others, and to help shape practical insight, ideas and actions that can strengthen collaboration across our sector and beyond.

If we are serious about long-term change, this is work we need to do together.

Join the Conversation

We are inviting a small number of participants to ensure space for meaningful discussion. The sessions will take place in central Edinburgh. Who should attend:

- CEOs (Small: under £1M annual turnover, Medium: £1-5M annual turnover, and Large: over £5M annual turnover)
- Chairs and Vice Chairs
